DETAILED ACTION

Preliminary Remarks

1. This Office action responds to the amendment and arguments filed by applicant on May 31, 2005 in reply to the previous Office action, mailed February 28, 2005.
2. The amendment of claim 1 by applicant in the reply filed on May 31, 2005 is hereby acknowledged.
3. The cancellation of claim 5 by applicant in the reply filed on May 31, 2005 is hereby acknowledged.

Election/Restriction

4. Claims 10-34 continue to stand withdrawn from further consideration pursuant to 37 CFR 1.142(b) as being drawn to a non-elected invention, there being no allowable generic or linking claim. Election was made without traverse in the reply filed January 10, 2005.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claims 1-4 and 6-9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over von Rosen et al. (US 6,493,677).

Von Rosen et al. disclose a method for selling, over a transmission network, unique information indicating products that indicate unique information, the method comprising: receiving, at a server, unique information supplied from a client device across the transmission network to the server; preparing, based on unique information, a preview image of a unique information indicating product that indicates the unique information; transmitting the prepared preview image to the client device; and displaying the preview image using a browser of the client device, wherein the displayed preview image includes text displayed in a text font for the unique information indicating product, but the method of von Rosen et al. does not explicitly include that the step of displaying includes displaying, using the browser of the client device, a plurality of preview images corresponding to different text fonts selectable for the unique information indicating product.

However, displaying text in various fonts in order to vary the appearance of the text is certainly a well known, hence obvious, step to include in any method of customizing the appearance of graphical information containing text, and official notice to that effect is hereby taken.

Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, at the time of the invention, to have modified the method of von Rosen et al. so as to include functionality to selectably display the text in different fonts, as is well known to do, in order to allow the customer to have greater control over the appearance of the product, and since so doing could be performed readily and easily by any person of ordinary skill in the art, with neither undue experimentation, nor risk of unexpected results.

Regarding claim 2, the steps of preparing and displaying of the method of von Rosen et al. are performed in real time response to character input performed at the client device for the unique information.

Regarding claim 3, the steps of preparing and displaying of the method of von Rosen et al. are performed in response to a preview reception request sent from the client device to the server.

Regarding claim 4, the step of displaying of the method of von Rosen et al. includes displaying, using the browser of the client device, a plurality of preview images corresponding to different colors selectable for the unique information indicating product.

Regarding claim 6, the step of displaying of the method of von Rosen et al. includes displaying, using the browser of the client device, a plurality of preview images corresponding to different sizes selectable for the unique information indicating product.

Regarding claim 7, the step of displaying of the method of von Rosen et al. includes displaying, using the browser of the client device, a plurality of preview images corresponding to different types selectable for the unique information indicating product.

Regarding claim 8, the step of receiving the unique information of the method of von Rosen et al. includes receiving a customer identifier; the step of preparing the preview image includes extracting, from a customer database that stores customer identifiers in correspondence with customer information, unique information associated with the customer identifier and preparing the preview image to indicate the extracted unique information on the unique information indicating product; and the step of displaying includes displaying the extracted unique information in the preview image of the unique information display product.

Regarding claim 9, the step of preparing of the method of von Rosen et al. includes preparing a customer identifier when the server receives unique information to be displayed on the unique information indicating product, but does not receive a customer identifier; and the step of transmitting the prepared preview image to the client device includes transmitting the prepared customer identifier.

Response to Arguments

7. Applicant's arguments filed May 31, 2005 have been fully considered but are not persuasive.

8. Regarding the argument that the method of von Rosen et al. displays graphic images that are not defined by fonts, the method of von Rosen et al. displays graphic images that indeed include text inherently defined by fonts, since the images include a graphic image and custom text input by the user and included in the display. See, in particular, column 12, lines 14-17.

9. Regarding the argument that the method of von Rosen et al. fails to include the selecting a preview image out of a plurality of preview images, it is noted that the features upon which applicant relies (i.e., selecting a preview image out of a plurality of preview images) are not recited in the rejected claim(s). Although the claims are interpreted in light of the specification, limitations from the specification are not read into the claims. See In re Van Geuns, 988 F.2d 1181, 26 USPQ2d 1057 (Fed. Cir. 1993).

10. Regarding the argument that, because an invention is not “anticipated” by the prior art under 35 U.S.C. 102 (i.e., that the reference “fails to disclose each and every feature of the claimed invention”), it is therefore patentable, applicant’s attention is directed to 35 U.S.C. 103, quoted hereinabove, which requires that, to be patentable, an invention must not only be unanticipated by the prior art, but must also be considered non-obvious, in light of the prior art.

Conclusion

11. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to the disclosure.

12. Applicant's amendment necessitated any new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a).

Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.

13. Any inquiry concerning this communication, or earlier communications, should be directed to the examiner, Jerry O'Connor, whose telephone number is (571) 272-6787, and whose facsimile number is (571) 273-6787.
